

The forceps for the fine manipulations contains two branches with the sharpened working ends rigidly connected at one of the sides. The springy branches are designed in a shape of zigzag. The branch ends from one side are rigidly connected while another ends come together in moving contact. The branch-crossing region includes the longitudinal fitted grooves.