

A radial-piston hydromotor has a cylinders block, where in each one are a piston and a slide, with a floating toe between those. Piston of each cylinder is equipped with a springy element, which is installed in its inner cavity, between the wall and the slide rod. Springy element is arranged in the form of two rings, which rest on each other with parts of their end surfaces.