

Method for reinforced material production is in applying to the base, from the front and back sides, a layer of polyvinyl-chloride elastron. As a base textile material with open pores is used, at that polyvinyl-chloride elastron is applied to the front and back sides in moldering state, with following pressing it to the open pores by heated rollers of a calender.