

The proposed high-temperature electromagnet contains a magnetic core, an armature, and a winding. The surface of the winding is coated with sealing material. Over the layer of the sealing material, several turns of tube made of resilient material are arranged.