

The proposed protected insulated wire contains a central phase conductor and a number of neutral conductors, which are continuously wound onto the central conductor. The central conductor is insulated from the neutral conductors. The neutral conductors are coated with an outside insulation layer.