

A method for orthotherapy provides for biomechanical self-correction. A body posture is corrected by displacement of gravity center of the body or separate parts thereof in the direction opposite to spinal curvature.