

A method for producing a simulated nut, said method comprising providing a premix by mixing soy bean particles having surfaces, a nut flavoring, and a binder comprising a saccharide in a wet flowable form wherein the surfaces of the soy bean particles are coated with the binder, and forming the premix into a self-supporting shape that is substantially similar to a natural nut shape.