

The invention relates to psychology and can be used for the psychological diagnostics of personality characteristics. The estimation is carried out by means of optical inputs as simple geometrical figures and acute and obtuse modifications thereof.