

A method for producing a sorbent for removal of heavy metals and radionuclides from aqueous media, which consists in that the press-cake from green comophyte mass of herbaceous plants after squeezing of cellular fluid is washed in acidified water, separated from water and dried.