

The invention relates to a composition of an edible, moisture-proof barrier suitable for baking which is effective for lowering the migration of moisture between the components of food products. The moisture-proof barrier comprises at least one crystalline carbohydrate, a highly crystalline fat and crystalline food cellulose.