

The invention relates to a security paper used for producing security documents such as banknotes, identity cards or the like. Said security paper comprises at least one through-opening which is produced during manufacture of the paper and which in the edge zone has no sharp defining edge.