

.

A method for information transformation and a device for embodiment of this relates to methods for code transformation and may be used by formation of information processing systems. The main point of the invention is obtaining a method for information processing and a device for embodiment of it, with use of which it would be possible to process output information before transmission and unauthorized disclosure would be impossible even if a key were available. The technical result is increase in speed of transformation of information.