

A method of air start, in which the rocket is launched from the passage shaft along the fuselage of turboprop aircraft, it is additionally accelerated by electro-pneumatic actuator on the racks along the sides of rocket and rip cord, starting length is increased by leaving of rocket from the aircraft maximally possibly back. During passage of the shaft, for reduction of temperature the water is injected into the flame of rocket engines.