

A connection device between a nozzle and a feed enclosure for feeding cooling fluid to at least one injector in a turbomachine, the device comprises at least one bushing having open axial ends engaged in orifices in a wall of the nozzle and in a wall of the feed enclosure, together with retaining means for retaining the bushing axially, the retaining means being formed to project from an outer cylindrical surface of the bushing between the axial ends of the bushing and at a distance from said ends.