

The invention relates to medicine, in particular to ophthalmology and ophthalmosurgery and can be used for treatment of open-angle glaucoma by surgical interference. The method involves hypotensive interference for three stages: supraciliary insections, lensectomy with implantation of intraocular lens, and surgical or laser-beam interference at the region of filtration angle.