

A metal-ceramic friction material based on titanium diboride contains components at the following ratio thereof, % of volume: copper - 5-13, nickel - 15-27, titanium diboride is the rest. The material in accordance with the invention has high friction properties and high wear-resistance.