

The invention concerns a turbofan engine, which contains an external jacket (24), an internal jacket (23), service lines for transferring of liquids located outside the external jacket (24), and service lines for transferring of liquids located inside the internal jacket (23). Between external jacket (24) and internal jacket (23) at least one detachable modular console (25) is installed for connection of service lines.