

Thermal spray powders suitable for application of a thermal barrier coating on a substrate can be obtained by plasma spraying a chemically homogeneous zirconia stabilized in the tetragonal form using a stabilizing oxide such as yttria to obtain a powder comprising substantially spherical hollow zirconia particles with sizes less than about 200 micrometers.