

A wireless communication device has logic that preferentially obtains provisioning information from a removable user identification module if one is provided, and otherwise obtains provisioning information resident in a permanently installed onboard non-volatile memory such as a flash memory device.