

A method for producing and reducing of coating, which forms a thermal barrier on the metallic basis, made from the super alloy, which base includes receiving and/or reducing of the coating, which includes the generation of the previous layer on the support or on the underlayer of this coating, disposed on this support, is carried out by application of one or more oil layers, which contains at least one, chosen from a group, platinum group elements and with chromium.