

The proposed high-sensitive method for determining content of perchlorate in water consists in producing the associate of perchlorate with crystalline violet dye, concentrating the associate on a nitrocellulose membrane filter, and determining the content of perchlorate by spectroscopy.