

The invention relates to pulverulent preparations for inhalation containing tiotropium, to a method for their production and to their use for producing a medicament for treating diseases of the respiratory tract, in particular for treating COPD (chronic obstructive pulmonary disease) and asthma.