

Invention relates to metallurgy and concerns method of cleaning the risers for bottom casting of steel. Removal of the worn lining is produced by simultaneous action on it by extrusion and knockout, moreover, the riser during removal of lining is located horizontally. The technical result – complete release of the body of riser from the remainders of fireproof mass, runner and scrap without damage of the riser itself.