

The invention relates to the transgenic plants of sugar beet, which owing to the presence of transgenic event have high glyphosate resistance, and to the methods for identification of these plants. The invention relates to the seeds, which are obtained from the mentioned plants and to the parts of these plants.