

Device for provision of access for subscribers of corporation computer network to resources of external networks relates to computer networks. Device consists of subscriber computers of network communication equipment, pack filter. Additionally block for measurement of coefficient of loading of external channel with processes of information transfer is included. The block is connected with one input to output of packages receiver from external network, and with the other one – to input of package filter. Technical result is in increase of rate of delivery of priority information and increase of quality of client servicing for those working in interactive mode in periods of overload of the external channel.