

A scavenging engine with parallel double-acting pistons connected across crankshaft and through-scavenging of working chambers with prevailing air volume at the end of working stroke of the pistons. Such implementation of engine improves working out of combustion products from cylinders and filling those with new charge of air.