

The invention relates to reprography. The inventive method for stamping articles consists in placing a loose printing block which is oriented by the top side thereof carrying a picture in the form of reliefographic information towards a heating pressure plate on a cold stationary plate, in disposing a sheet material on the top side of the plate and in pressing said sheet material thereto by means of said heating pressure plate.