

The invention relates to machine building, namely to devices, which are used for closing of bottles with beverages, in particular to tightening and closing of caps on the bottles with threaded necks.