

A bottle for storage and application of drugs is offered, which comprises elastic housing with a neck, bar-store which is very tightly placed into neck opening and projects by the one its end, and pressurizing hubcap for closing of neck. The housing is parted by partition on the upper and lower containers, connected between each other by a capillary canal which is located in partition.