

The invention relates to device for determination of position of at least one surface of division between the layer of slag and metal melt that includes bearing tube at one end of which measuring head is installed, with body fixed in the bearing tube, this has turned from the bearing tube end and is in fact that in the measuring head generator is installed, and out of the body, in front of its end, inductivity coil is installed, this is connected to generator.