

The invention relates to a sustained-release formulation for peroral dosage together with a meal, comprising at least one active agent and optionally one or more pharmaceutically-acceptable adjuncts and an amount of gas-forming agent, permitting a largely homogeneous mixing of the active agent with the stomach contents and hence a continuous uptake of the active agent.