

The invention relates to an improved method for extracting and then recovering ingredients from biological material, particularly sugar beets.