

The invention relates to an adhesive composition comprising at least partly gelatinised starch and one or more polymers (P) containing an amine group or an amide group. It also relates to a method of gluing pieces of wood based materials and to a wood based product.