

The invention relates to an illuminated frame system for framing a display unit, such as screens and the like, comprising a frame, on which illuminating means, preferably in the form of LED's are arranged. Such an illuminating frame system can be used advantageously in gaming devices that comprise at least one screen. According to the invention, shading means are associated with the illuminating means provided on the frame for shadowing the frame inner space against light emitted from the illuminating means.