

The invention relates to an external lacing panel for a building, comprising: an upper transverse edge including an upper overlap zone intended to be covered by an adjacent panel, a lower transverse edge including a lower overlap zone intended to cover an adjacent panel, a central part connecting the transverse edges and covered by at least one photovoltaic module, and an opening located in the upper overlap zone and in which an electrical junction box is inserted.