

A filter for water purification includes a body, a filter element made of floating granular material that is located in the body, a central pipeline, an upper distribution system and a system of process pipelines. The upper distribution system is made as a cover with branch pipes for connection to the process pipelines and its lower side is provided with a cup with perforated surface.