

The invention relates to a roller mill for grounding cereals or the like, comprising a driving mechanism operated by straps (9) for effecting varying rotation speeds.

The invention aims at ensuring a constant tension of the straps (9) and consequently a smooth operation of said straps (9).

For this purpose, a disc (18) of a tension roller (8) has separately adjustable sections (14, 15).