

This invention relates to a color composition comprising two different types of optically variable pigments having a viewing angle dependent shift of colour.