

An universal head of siphon contains a tube for supply of liquid and a washer. The head is detachable and is made from plastic. Its housing contains a groove for back-and-forth motion of pressing roller over the surface of elastic tubular element located between the washer and the nipple. The invention relates to the siphons for gassed water, in particular, intended for household use.