

Invention relates to a method for the removal of sulfur from the leaching cycle of nickel processes such as leaching of nickel matte. According to the method, anolyte generated in nickel electrowinning is neutralized with the aid of a calcium-based neutralizing agent, wherein sulfur is removed from the leaching cycle as gypsum.

