

An industrial device for trawling fishing providing safe working conditions on a deck of a ship purposed for lowering down and lifting a trawl and can be used also at other hoisting units. The industrial device contains a winch with a drum for multilayer winding of a warp, a warp layer and a suspended block, which are hingingly connected between each other with a telescopic tube for passing the warp. The warp layer and the suspended block contain two pairs of giuding profiled rollers each.