

Device for fastening and tension of sieve net relates to equipment for separation of loose materials by size and may be used in coal, mining, building, food and other fields of industry. In device composed of supporting structure for net, units for fastening and tension of the net equipped with a roller mounted with ability of rotation on bearings that are located in a screen box, and a roller stop, said roller is made in the form of tube with longitudinal groove for placing the net. Device for fastening contains wedge for net fastening. This design ensures longevity, quick change of net and allows to reduce maintenance costs.