

An electrocycle has a housing to which two motor blocks are attached. Each of those has a power source comprising two accumulator batteries, and a direct current electromotor that is connected via chain or belt transmission to the drive wheel. The motor blocks are coupled via a conic transmission.