

The proposed low-pressure luminescence lamp contains a cathode constructed as a tubular tungsten spiral filled with oxide material having activity required for exciting luminescence. The filling material contains powder alloy of iridium with rare-earth cerium group metal, with addition, or without addition, of tungsten, rhenium, hafnium or platinum group metal. The said powder alloy is uniformly distributed over the filler volume.