

A brake block for the railway rolling stock contains a polymer friction element fixed on a metal framework. Metal framework is made in the form of a frame and a back unit with holes. The blocks of the back unit on each side of the back part of the block are coated with a polymer friction composite.