

Method for making protective coating on metal implant comprises of placing the implantate to the vacuum chamber, heating, application of silicon with simultaneous processing by a beam of accelerated ions, cooling, application of carbon diamond-like coating, and immersing the implantate to physiological solution.