

A method for making trolley of conveyor machine consists in making the frame of the trolley of elements connected to a unit, with fixation of axles in the housing and installation on those elements for motion with which the trolley rests on the rails. Elements of the frame and the axle are sequentially connected to one unit, for instance, by welding; this forms non-dismountable housing.