

Multi-storey sectional multi-level in height building has walls, floors, covering with support elements and roofing. At that, the covering elements are placed at different in height marks and formed with bearing walls of at least one section of the building and intermediate support elements placed between those, the last ones are arranged as frames made of stands and beams placed on those in horizontal positions, and the covering is made in one piece for the whole building and is a curvilinear convex-concave monolithic reinforced-concrete slab.