

Boring head has housing, placed in the housing core lifter with a punch, crown with end slots and end depressions and installed in end slots in free way core-formation cutters, those have cams for interaction with the punch, and support tail elements, those are placed in end depressions with radial gap. In the radial gap between the end depressions and support tail elements of the core-formation cutters springy elements are installed.