

The method for bulloplasty of the suture line in resection of bullas in the patients with the generalized bullous lung emphysema comprises the resection of the bullas employing the suturing apparatus. In addition the walls of the adjacent bullas from the opposite sides of the suture are grasped with the clamp over the line of the mechanical suture. The suture is dipped into the lung parenchyma. Then the walls of the bullas under the clamp are ligated throughout the entire length of the suture.
